Trend Driver | Why It Matters | Global Source

Rising regulatory fragmentation | Automotive companies face USD $45 billion in annual compliance costs due to divergent global standards, creating urgent demand for localized expertise | McKinsey Global Institute

ESG and sustainability mandates | New emissions and supply-chain laws require compliance professionals who can translate policy into operational controls—roles that pay 28% above industry averages | World Economic Forum

Geopolitical trade shifts | Post-Ukraine war supply chains and US-China decoupling mean automotive firms need compliance strategists to navigate tariffs, sanctions, and local content rules | OECD
